THE

PREFACE.

THERE being no Knowledge Man is by Nature so fitted for, none more capable of the clearest Demonstration, nor any of greater Importance to Human Life than the Science of Morality, (of which the Law constitutes the most considerable Part) and the Understanding being adapted to, and given for the Discovery of Truth, and the Mind being as much and as naturally delighted with it, as the Eye is pleased with Beauty and Proportion, it should seem no false or far-fetched Inference to conclude, That no Science is more agreeable and easie, none better cultivated or digested (tho' in reality none is less so) into Methodical Systems. To enquire into the Reason why this Knowledge is in such a State, is not so pertinent to the present Design, as it is to observe that the Difficulty and Disagreeableness of this Study, is not to be imputed to any intrinsick Defect in it self, but to the manner in which the Books that contain this Learning are written.

The ensuing Collection is extracted from, and designed for the easier reading of, the Report-Books, all which (tho' they make up the most considerable Part of every Lawyer's Study) consist (three excepted) of loose unconnected Determinations of the several Courts of Westminster, on particular Cases in Number about 30000, related according to the Order of Time in which they were debated or adjudged, without any regard to the Affinity or Connexion of the Points of Law that came in Question.

What Science thus deliver'd would not be intricate and obscure, disagreeable in the Study, and difficult to attain?

This Confusion seems to have occasioned the Publication of so many Abridgments, of which the Reader may see the Learned Fleetwood's Judgment, in his Preface to the Table he composed to the last Volume of the Year-Books; 'tis well worth Reading, but is too long to be here inserted.

That those vast Volumes are not so useful, even as Tables, will be allowed, though it were admitted (which in Fact is not true) that the Titles are judiciously chosen, the Divisions and Subdivisions well made, and none but apt Cases digested under them; for when Titles are extended to many thousands, a competent Skill in the Law is required to distinguish the Extent of every Title, and consequently to guess where the Cases that are wanted may be found; therefore those Abridgments seem to be so far from being a Help to Young Lawyers, for whom they are chiefly designed, that they cannot be used by any who have not made a good Progress in their Studies. Nay farther, Those Laborious Authors seem to have pursued a very wrong Design; for the Study of the Law cannot be render'd easie by writing vast and many Volumes, which are not Authority, but by reducing the Sense of those which are, into a compleat Methodical System, of which the Law is as capable as the Mathematiks, or as any other Science.

The P R E F A C E.

Till that is effected by some Guide for reading the Cases in the Report-Books, (whence the Materials for that Work are chiefly to be drawn) in such Order, that the Subject of the ensuing Case may have some Coherence and Connexion with the foregoing, and that all the Cases concerning one Title may be read without interfering with others that have no Relation to them: This is designed by the ensuing Papers which were some Years ago compiled for the Collector's private Use; and having answer'd to him the incredible Trouble it cost him, are now printed for the Service of others. In the composing whereof two things were to be considered.

1. How the Cases should be refer'd to; and without much Deliberation it was determined to do it in the manner they are cited in our Books, viz. by the Name and Page of the Author, and with the Names of the Case, and so the Reader will see it done throughout the ensuing Sheets, only the Names of the Authors are abbreviated; but how those are to be understood will be easily known by the List of the Authors annexed.

2. Under what Titles the References were to be disposed. This indeed was a Task that deserved and had the nicest Examination. To mention all the Reasons for the Choice that was made, would be to write a Dissertation concerning the Methodizing the Law, which is more than is now intended.

This, however, the Reader may observe, that the Design of a Table is only for the reader finding what is wanted in other Books; therefore that Method is to be pursued that is most obvious and plain, that it may be of a general and extensive Use.

The P R E F A C E.

The References to the Cases of Personal Actions are contained in the first eighty-seven Titles, and they are Alphabetically ranged. The seven next contain the Real Actions. The Pleas of the Crown follow under five Heads. The Writs under fourteen. And the Cases in Chancery, and other Courts (except the King's Bench and Common Pleas, and such as were in the Exchequer, on Actions in which the Jurisdictions are concurrent) in the six last. And because sometimes the Nature of the Actions in which the Resolutions of the Court were given, is not specified, and therefore such Cases were not reducible to any of the former Heads, they are disposed under proper Titles Alphabetically: From having the References to the Books thus disposed, and all the Cases concerning one Title reduced to it, these Conveniences amongst others arise.

1. Any Cases that are wanted, if we know the Nature of the Action, will be found by looking under that Title; or if we only know the Names of the Case, we may find them in the Tables, by the Index, at the end of the Book.

2. When any Case is (as very many are) reported in several Books, by the help of these Tables it may be found in all the Books, and may be read at the same time, which will be of very great Use in the reading any of the Report-Books, except Saunders and Vaughan.

3. The great Trouble of Common-placing may be thus avoided, for reading the Cases concerning one sort of Action, one Title with a few Subdivisions will serve: Whereas, when the Cases are read in the same Order they lie in the Report-Books, we shall have Occasion for as many Titles as we have Cases.

4. All Certainty and Knowledge consisting in the discoverable Connexion of our Idea's, and Demonstration being nothing else but the Perception of their Agreement or Disagreement, by the Intervention of that, which; with respect to the Mind, we call a Middle Idea, the Words that denote it with the School-Logicians being a Middle Term, and more properly, without respect to either, an intermediate Truth; it evidently follows, that by reading all the Cases on a Subject, in a continued Series, without Intervention of Cases foreign to them, all the Idea's concerning it more readily offer themselves to the Understanding; and the greater Number of Idea's, concerning one thing, the Mind hath under its View at once, the more likely it is to find such intermediate Truths, as may help to discover the Connexion or Opposition of those which cannot be immediately compared. This is the great means of improving our Knowledge, the best Help to decide dubious Cases, and gain a scientific Knowledge of what is already received for Law, on the Authority of Cases, the Reason whereof is ever to be sought; for the Law is not to be proved like Facts by the Number of Authorities, but by the Weight and Force of Arguments.
4 else

The P R E F A C E.

Lastly, The reading all the Cases on one Subject together, will be as great a Help to the Memory, as it has been already observed to be to the Understanding; for thereby we shall be enabled (which is the Use we should make of the Knowledge of Particulars in all Sciences) to collect some Rules that will comprize the Sense and Reason of many Cases in few but general Terms; and these general Idea's being wrought within and abstracted by the Mind from Particulars, they make a greater Impression on the Brain than any thing that is conveyed to it, meerly from exterior Objects by the Senses. Further, Our Idea's of Generals are more clear than those of Particulars, and general Truths have a greater mutual Connexion than particular, therefore (the Memory ever retaining that best that was most clearly conceived and best understood) they are longest remembered, and most easily recollected.

The P R E F A C E.

To conclude, What Errors may have happen'd through the fault of the Collector or Press, and that some have happen'd through both is probable, the candid Reader will easily pardon; to such as shall impute any to the Collector, he says,

Vive, vale: siquid novisti rectius istis,
Candidus imperti; si non, his utere mecum.
